

New Family Literacy Center Launches Daily Dose English Program

Liz Mitchell, Nebo School District employee, holds a Daily Dose English Huddle at Payson High School, Payson, Utah for parents of students. The school district sent home flyers with their high school students, written in Spanish, inviting the parents to learn English. Wade Menlove, who establishes and oversees the Family Literacy Centers, explained that they will be adding other Family Literacy Centers soon. "These people have come a long way in the few weeks they have been coming here. They are speaking quite a bit of English already and they have more confidence in speaking," explains Mr. Menlove about the early success of the program.

The Speaker's Bureau opened in October and is still accepting applications. If you are a speaker and would like to be considered, please send your "One Sheet" to info@dailydoselearning.com.

See sample "One Sheet" here.

Of interest and follow-up: Mrs. Evelia Young in Alabama continues to reach out and teach English to her neighbors as a service to them. She's now using the Daily Dose General Life Skills course in addition to the Construction Safety topics. And inside the think tank of Daily Dose, new products are busily being created!

Daily Dose Learning Systems met with attendees of the 12th Economic Self-Reliance Conference, sponsored by Brigham Young University. Several attendees at this conference obtained the Daily Dose English Program to be used in such countries as Myanmar, Malaysia, Russia, India, Sudan, Indonesia, Peru, Ecuador and Columbia.

Links to our AGC Partners can also be found on our website at www.dailydoselearning.com/construction

About Daily Dose Learning Systems
Daily Dose Learning Systems is a leading provider of English and safety training programs developed specifically for the workplace. We offer an effective coaching system to help employees learn English and safety, develop job skills, and improve job performance. Through a human interaction we call "Huddles," employees acquire confidence, develop teamwork, and help improve customer satisfaction. Tens of thousands of people have learned English and skills using Daily Dose since 2001.